Invisible Man may be said to exemplify the paranoid style of American literature. How does Ellison establish an atmosphere of paranoia in his novel, as though the reader, along with the narrator, "had waded out into a shallow pool only to have the bottom drop out and the water close over my head" [p.432]?

DETAIL: Invisible Man is Ralph Ellison's only novel and is widely acknowledged as one of the great novels of African-American literature. The invisibility of Ellison's protagonist is about the invisibility of identity—above all, what it means to be a black man—and its various masks, confronting both personal experience and the force of social illusions.

Ellison's invisible man is a natural consequence of American society. Black folk in America have been and still are forced to live invisible to white folk, who occupy positions of power that exert life-threatening levels of control over their lives. That's why stereotypes, for Ellison, were of predominant importance.
